

1 I, CHARLENE WILLEY, declare as follows:

3 1. My name is Charlene Willey and I am a librarian/assistant professor at 4 Malone College in Canton, Ohio.

6 2. My son, Carlton Willey, is a student at Northwestern University in 7 Evanston, Illinois. Carlton had heard good things about TestMasters from 8 classmates at Northwestern University and was interested in enrolling in the 9 TestMasters class.

11 3. My son, my husband, and I believed that www.testmasters.com was the 12 website that belonged to TestMasters, as it offered LSAT classes across the United 13 States. The website led us to believe that if he enrolled in TestMasters with two 14 other people, he would be entitled to a group discount, so my son found two other
15 students, who wanted to enroll in the TestMasters' LSAT class and asked that I
16 enroll them at the same time that I enroll him.

18 4. My husband and I were worried about enrolling the three students at 19 once because we thought that the tuition of the other two students may somehow be 20 charged to us so we procrastinated on enrolling him into the TestMasters' class.

22 5. Luckily, a few days later my son called us and informed us not to 23 enroll him in the LSAT course that is located at www.testmasters.com and that the 24 TestMasters LSAT class we were looking for was located at www.testmasters180.com.
25

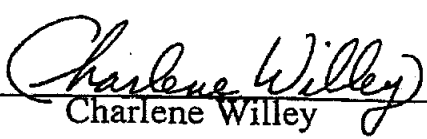

26 6. We were lucky in that we procrastinated on enrolling him in the LSAT
27 course. If my son had not called us back to let us know that we were at the wrong
28 TestMasters, we would have called the wrong TestMasters at www.testmasters.com and enrolled him and his two friends in their LSAT class.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct.

Executed this 10th day of June 2003, at Canton, Ohio.
