2. I plan to take the LSAT in October and was interested in signing up for the LSAT prep class at TestMasters, which I believed was located in Beverly Hills, California. However, when I went to what I believed was TestMasters' website, it stated that they were not offering LSAT courses in California in 2003. I was confused as to why they would not be offering any classes in California because I thought TestMasters was one of the three largest LSAT companies, along with Kaplan and Princeton Review.

3. I then did further research on the internet and learned that the company that I was looking for had a different website. If I had not taken the time to research, I would have not found the TestMasters that I was looking for and would not have found out that TestMasters was offering courses in California this summer.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States of America that the foregoing is true and correct.

Executed this 6th day of June 2003, at 5:20 P.M.
